Vacancies Law Ruled Illegal

KINGSTON — Supreme Court Justice John H. Pennock has handed down a decision that finds Ulster County's Local Law No. 1 of 1976 "void and of no effect."

The law, adopted last January by a vote of 19 to 10 in the County Legislature, allowed the Legislature to fill its own vacancies, taking that privilege from the governor.

Specifically, Pennock found the law was "an illegal act, without effect in fact or law, and was not properly or regularly adopted by the Legislature."

Republican legislators had proposed the law when Robert H. Kuhlmann, R-Dist. 1, was forced to resign by order of the governor when his job with the State Corrections Department was found in conflict with his legislative position. Following adoption of the home rule law and Kuhlmann's resignation, Frank R. Spada, R-Dist. 1, was appointed to the vacated post by resolution in early February.

Pennock's decision also found that the attorney general "has the power to bring an action to remove Spada from office," based on the fact that "he was appointed illegally."

The court's decision resulted from legal action challenging Local Law 1 by Legislature Minority Leader Louis M. Klein, D-Dist. 6, and former Legislator Louis Resnick. They argued that County Law explicitly grants the power to the governor to fill such vacancies and that Executive Law grants to the Attorney General the power to bring an action for the removal of a person who claims a public office following an illegal appointment.

Klein said today that since Spada is "serving illegally," he expects action to remove him within two weeks. He said the attorney general will also have to determine whether the votes Spada has cast since being seated should be considered "valid" or will have to be "given up." Another consideration, Klein said, is whether Spada is entitled to receive compensation since his appointment and whether Kuhlmann will have to repay to the county the salary he received.

Klein also fully expects the Republican majority of the Legislature to appeal the Pennock decision in an effort to postpone any judgment on the removal of Spada. Pending that appeal, he said, it will be up to the judge whether to order direct removal of Spada or allow a waiting period until a later determination is made.

Plan Being Readied For Funds, Then Jobs

KINGSTON — More county jobs and a broader industrial base are the chief aims of the Overall Economic Development Plan (OEDP) Ulster County hopes to have ready for federal approval by June 30, the deadline for funding.

Approval of the plan, being drawn up by a committee of 19 members headed by Richard B. Mathews, would make the county eligible for substantial funding through grants and loans from the Economic Development Administration.

In several sessions held to date, the committee has been developing an economic analysis of Ulster's ills, hopefully specific enough to merit federal approval, but sufficiently flexible to allow for interpretation as options and decisions become clearer.

Chronic unemployment is listed as the county's most serious problem in the committee's preliminary draft, with the notation that "the causes are complex and not amenable to simple cause and effect."

Ulster has long had one of the highest unemployment rates in the state and is particularly vulnerable currently with economic activity virtually at a standstill in the Northeast.

Presently, there are not enough jobs in the county, and little indication of a quick turnaround in the immediate future.

The OEDP program being drafted for consideration by the County Legislature at its June 10 session will list economic development goals and outline an action program to achieve those goals.

The principal long-range task, the committee feels, is to expand employment in the industrial sector. Most of the county's working force was found to be in blue collar jobs and expansion in industry would provide year-round employment for this large sector of unemployed.

Another hope of the OEDP Committee is to improve and expand Ulster's tourism to provide year-round employment.

Among short-range goals envisioned: promotion of federal and state facilities and programs in the county; a better match between employment opportunities and skills; development of a continuing program for economic analysis; recommendation of public expenditures priorities to improve the county's economic base.

Attracting more high quality and permanent manufacturing firms to the area, the committee feels, is the long-range solution to the county's economic woes. Part of the key to this effort, Mathews and other members said will be the ability to mobilize the county's resources for attracting industry and to provide useful public services and facilities.

In the short run, however, they say, Ulster may have to concentrate its efforts on a slightly less ambitious scale by seeking to attract satellite industries to service the present manufacturing sector.

One necessity noted in the preliminary draft is an improved information network to interest new and small industries to locate in Ulster, as well as to help existing industries to expand.

Mathews said the OEDP plan could lay the groundwork for future economic development through recommendations to improve the infrastructure of public facilities and cultural resources. He also says the public will have an opportunity to provide feedback to the committee's efforts after the county's designation as a Redevelopment Area. The specific projects requested for funding will be topics for citizen participation at public hearings, he says.

Thousands of spectators turned out for Kingston's Memorial Day parade Monday. Among the many musical groups adding to the sound and color of the event was Kingston's own High School Band. (Story and more pictures on Page 16.)

Memorial Day March Claims Vet

KINGSTON—One of this city's well-known veterans, Frederick D. Schryver, 49, collapsed and died Monday afternoon of a heart seizure as he marched in the annual Memorial Day parade.

Mr. Schryver, owner of a restaurant at 138 Smith Avenue, was marching with the Ulster County Marine Corps League detachment. The group was passing the Jerry Martin Pontiac Garage at 708 Broadway when he collapsed.

He was rushed to Benedictine Hospital by an ambulance company participating in the parade but was dead on arrival.

It was because of a chronic heart problem that Schryver had not marched in the Memorial Day parade for the past few years. He survived a heart attack two years ago.

Schryver was a member of many local veteran's organizations. A Marine Corps veteran of World War II, he was an active member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Legion, the Marine Corps League and the American Veteran Veterans Association.

His association with veterans organizations was his big interest. You could always count on Fred to participate in any event. He was proud of his veterans status and was always willing to help, an associate stated.

Mr. Schryver's sudden death marred an otherwise uneventful Memorial Day parade. Despite overcast skies and a threat of rain, thousands lined the city parade route to honor those who gave their lives in the service of their country.

One of the marchers showed surprise at Mr. Schryver's death. "The last I saw of him, he was going to ride in a car instead of walk, the veteran said. (See Mr. Schryver's obituary on page 2).

Carter Prestige on Today's Primary Line

(By UPI)

President Ford and Ronald Reagan were expected to break even in today's Montana, Rhode Island and South Dakota primaries, while two Western liberals fought to beat front-running Democrat Jimmy Carter in the three states.

For candidates in both parties, the three primaries were just a warmup for next week's showdown in Ohio, New Jersey and California where one-third of the delegates needed to win the Republican and Democratic nominations will be elected.

Since there are only 56 Democratic delegates at stake today, Carter still will be the big front-runner, but he could suffer psychologically if liberals Frank Church and Morris Udall beat him in two or all three of the contests. Church is assured of winning Montana, and was pressing Carter in Rhode Island, while Udall stood a chance of winning his first primary in South Dakota.

Carter has lost five of the last nine elections — three to Church and two to California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

Reagan and Ford have virtually ignored the three states. Ford was favored in Rhode Island; South Dakota was a tossup; and Montana, which holds only a beauty contest with no delegate election, was expected to go for Reagan.

As of today, Ford held an edge in delegates of 794 to 650 for Reagan, with 1,130 needed to nominate.

Carter has won 17 primaries and is far ahead with 885 of the 1,605 delegates needed to win the Democratic nomination. Udall was second with 301.

Carter remained optimistic about his chances as he campaigned Sunday and Monday in Rhode Island and made a stop also in South Dakota on his way to California.

He called Rhode Island a key state but said "there's no cause for concern."

"I have a good chance to win Rhode Island," Carter said. "I would be disappointed and surprised if we should lose here..."

But he declined to make a similar prediction for South Dakota and Montana.

In Rhode Island, where 22 Democratic delegates are at stake, Carter faces both Church and Brown, who is not on the ballot but has campaigned hard for an uncommitted slate.

Udall was given a chance to win in South Dakota after a saturation campaign that kept him in the state most of the past four days. The state will elect 17 delegates, and has no beauty contest.

Tuned In on First Mama

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

May 21, 1976

Dear Mrs. Dart,

A big 10-4 and many thanks for thinking of me.

I am proud to be included among CB'ers who have joined together in a common network of mutual support, assistance and friendship.

This is KUY 9532, "First Mama," sending all good numbers your way from the Home-20 along with my wishes for a good day today and a better day tomorrow.

Nice modulating with you!

Betty Ford

Mrs. Kathryn Dart
178 Third Avenue
Kingston, New York 12401

KINGSTON — A Kingston woman got a letter from the First Lady last week assuring her she had managed against the odds to tune in on one of Mrs. Ford's CB radio transmission. "This is the base of First Mama at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave.," Mrs. Kathryn Dart, 178 Third Ave., heard on her CB radio three weeks ago.

With her "Break-19" request for air clearance honored, Mrs. Dart went back for confirmation and was told again she was modulating with "First Mama". When she lost Mrs. Ford's voice she dropped the First Lady a note asking if she'd talked with her or a prankster. Back came a letter verifying their contact. "I was thrilled," said Mrs. Dart, who has been a CBer for 16 years. With 15 million Americans bitten by the CB bug, the chances of eavesdropping on Mrs. Ford are nearly nil.

Martha Died Destitute and Alone

NEW YORK — Martha Mitchell, the Arkansas girl who became one of the more colorful and controversial figures of Nixon's Washington, died Monday at the age of 57.

Mrs. Mitchell, estranged wife of former Attorney General John Mitchell, died destitute and alone. She will be buried Thursday in her hometown of Pine Bluff, Ark. (More details on Page 26.)

28 State Dead During Holiday

ALBANY — The 78-hour Memorial Day holiday weekend that ended at midnight Monday claimed 24 lives in New York State highway accidents, one fewer than the 1975 total of 27 and 22 fewer than the 1972 record.

In addition, two persons drowned. Drivers heading home Monday were greeted by dreary skies and fog in western sections. The forecast for late travelers today called for a similar outlook, with thunderstorms hanging on in some sections. (More details nationally on page 26)

Syrians Increase Presence in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A fresh regiment of Syrian armored troops dug into positions in northeast Lebanon today, breaking a leftist siege of two Christian towns and sharply escalating Damascus' intervention in the 14-month civil war.

The 2,000 Syrian army regulars and at least 60 tanks rolled across the border Monday night and advanced five miles through the leftist blockade to the villages of Andkeet and Kobayat, 31 miles northeast of Tripoli, rightist and leftist sources said.

Thailand to Oust Last U.S. Spy Base

BANGKOK, Thailand — Thailand today ordered the closing of the last U.S. spy base in the country by July 20, ruling out any American military presence except the 270 advisers who will remain after the deadline.

Foreign Minister Bichai Rattakul, in a taped interview for national television, said he had turned down a last-minute proposal by U.S. Ambassador Charles Whitehouse to allow some American personnel to remain at the Ramasun base. But he said some of the equipment there would remain and would be operated by Thai nationals.

Juan Carlos Emulates Columbus

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic — Spanish King Juan Carlos, the first Spanish head of state to visit the Western Hemisphere, came to the New World to retrace the footsteps of Christopher Columbus.

Covering the almost 500-year-old route by air, the king and his wife, Queen Sophia, arrived Monday at Santo Domingo, once the government seat of Spain's flourishing New World colonies.

County Blood Bank Will Seek to Join NY

KINGSTON — The Ulster County Blood Bank will petition to affiliate with the Greater New York Blood Program.

The UCBB Board of Directors voted the action at a recent meeting after hearing presentations from various organizations with which affiliation had been explored. The action is subject to approval by the New York State Supreme Court and Attorney General Louis K. Lefkowitz.

A hearing to consider the petition has been scheduled for 10 a.m. Friday at the Ulster County Court House on Wall Street.

Representatives from the American Association of Blood Banks, the American Red Cross Northeast Regional Blood Program, the City of Kingston Laboratory, and the Greater New York Blood Program spoke to directors at the recent meeting, explaining the various affiliations possible and their effect on UCBB members.

Henry Groepler, UCBB president, said that by midsummer a regional office of the BNYBP would be opened in Valhalla in Westchester County. It will cover the seven-county Lower Hudson Valley Health Service Area and the Northern Metropolitan Hospital Association, whose 43 members include the Kingston, Benedictine and Ellenville Community hospitals.

All blood drawn under the GNYBP license will be processed and re-distributed to the participating hospitals in this area. Groepler said that this would lower by more than 10 per cent the outdated (loss of blood not used during its 21-day useful life) of blood and accomplish a more efficient distribution and use of this most vital resource.

Groepler emphasized that UCBB will retain its identity, and the Bloodmobile will be used extensively throughout the county for visits to industries, schools and other participating members.

Under the GNYBP affiliation, members and their immediate families will be eligible to receive blood anywhere in the United States. Leukemia and hemophilia victims are covered, and Medicare patients will no longer have to pay for the first three pints of blood received. Enrollment fees, annual dues and payment in lieu of donations will be eliminated, Groepler said.

Freeman Readers Write

Wants the School Facts

Dear Editor:

Mr. Van Allen's letter in the May 18th issue of the Freeman was very appropriately titled "Interesting Data." As a matter of fact, it has provided the impetus to write this plea that you assign a reporter to gather all the other bits of "interesting data" needed to really understand the issues at the high school.

At least two School Board elections have come and gone since the issue of overcrowding surfaced; and I, for one, still don't have the facts. While the birth rate is relevant, it is not the sole criteria to consider. It isn't at all clear that the birth figures cited are for the City of Kingston or the entire area of the Consolidated School District. What were the population figures in the school district in that same period? Surely you are aware that IBM moved into the area in 1955. In addition, two new private high schools (John A. Coleman and Ulster Academy) have come into being in the same period covered by the birth figures. How have they affected enrollment in the high school?

My point is, why hasn't the Freeman seen fit to take on this task of digging out all the facts, and informing its readers? We desperately need answers to many questions. Just for starters, here are a few.

1) Is the high school really overcrowded, and how is this measured?

2) Why do we have an "open campus"? When I put my child on the school bus in the morning, I'm entrusting her care to the school authorities. They should not allow her to roam free or unsupervised during free periods.

3) What are the projections for future enrollments, and what is the basis for these projections?

4) What are the details of each of the alternative solutions to the alleged overcrowding proposed by the State Department of Education; and what are the pros and cons (economic and emotional) of each?

5) If it is found that space is not an issue, what will it cost to refurbish the present high school?

I don't pretend that the answers to the above questions will conclusively prove or disprove overcrowding now or in the future. I do feel, however, that the issues need clarification and feel your paper could do the community a great service by presenting some facts.

Sincerely,
LEO R.

Questions for Von Hoffman

Dear Editor:

William Buckley recently observed that his fellow columnist, Nicholas Von Hoffman, has a highly developed capacity for indignation. I am inclined to agree. The current object of his indignation is the administration of Georgetown University which recently "pulled the plug" on its FM radio station, WGTB. The station had "built up a following of younger and certainly looser people by presenting a format of slightly hip and slightly left mixture of music and talk." He concluded (indignantly, of course) that the plug-pullers "are so drained of hope, honor and creation that they can't believe that there is more to do today than to repeat yesterday" for they "can't take a chance on a 10 watt radio station that might broadcast a dirty word or a new idea." This leads him to suggest that the F.C.C. tighten up on the licensing of such stations. The rationale? Just "because one is non-commercial or educational does not follow that one doesn't have the ambition to lock out diversity."

Mr. Von Hoffman is right on the money here. But I would ask, (not indignantly) why he would support such a measure against the likes of a 10 watt station, privately funded by an institution that is unashamedly and predictably partisan by its very nature; yet oppose (with cries of 'censorship') any attempt to attain a measure of balance in the programming of public T.V., which is tax supported and supposedly non-partisan yet whose liberal bias is so blatant that even most of its supporters choose to explain why it is so, rather than deny it? Could the answer be the age-old one dealing with whose ox is being gored?

It requires no great subtlety of thought to become aware of Mr. Von Hoffman's feelings about religion and religious. He flaunts them as he states that "such stuff (the 'stuff' being biblical quotations) is no more degrading to the human spirit than 'Kojak' or 'S.W.A.T.'—and that 'Unlike many in holy orders, the Jesuits are often not only Christian in behavior, but literate and sophisticated in outlook.'" (I assume that since they have demonstrated that not all or their members are as wacked-out as the sainted Berrigan brothers, the poor Jesuits are now also numbered among the ranks of the un-Christian, unsophisticated and unlettered.)

Yet, these opinions should not blind him or anyone to the fact that a university devoid of a philosophy is not worthy of the name— and that any university which continues to sponsor an activity that is opposed to its philosophy, is administered by the simplest of mortals.

Despite his indignation, the Jesuits of Georgetown did not deprive Mr. Von Hoffman or anyone else of either the substance or style of the late staff of WGTB. One needs but to tune in on PTV or a myriad of commercial talk shows for its moral and political content— and for its sophisticated style, go no further than the nearest subway wall.

Sincerely,
F.T. CAHILL

Backs Keough Raise

Dear Editor:

A recently published letter by Mr. and Mrs. Donald Groenewold which was addressed to me, criticized the current Ontario Board of Education for giving Dr. Keough an increase in salary.

The fact is Dr. Keough's contract was negotiated for the district by Dr. Marlow and signed by former Board President W. Jack Kahn in 1973. The present board is honoring that agreement.

Furthermore, Dr. Keough is certainly deserving of a salary raise. Less than three years ago Dr. Keough came to Ontario. Since that time he has earned for the district over $250,000 and saved Ontario approximately another $180,000.

These are accomplishments worthy of appreciation.

Since you are concerned about the largest raise, please note, Dr. Marlow's salary of over $43,000 will be by far the largest increased salary this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Groenewold, where did you get the mistaken notion that Dr. Keough will not be on the staff next year? Dr. Keough's performance has been outstanding and Ontario needs him.

Sincerely,
DONALD A. LAWSON,
SCHOOL BOARD PRESIDENT

Sees Negative Views

Dear Editor:

Again, Richard Schermerhorn, you show us what a closed minded individual you are by your recent criticism of the Lt. Governor's stand on lesbian rights. You even evoke the bible as a justification for your hang-ups. It is a basic freedom to love and live your life the way you see fit, is it not? Why can't you see this and accept it instead of putting down people who don't share your views or needs? It's 1976, not 1776. We need leaders who are sensitive and understanding to a multitude of different kinds of people, not just the ones he or she can relate to. Clean up your act, Senator. Most of your views sound negative to me.

Solidarity of Home

Dear Editor:

I remember with a heavy heart when my grandmother on Dad's side passed away.

As I look around, I don't see many grandparents anymore. They pass with the old-fashioned American home and family?

They do exist with a telephone call or a pathetic letter, and if they are lucky they could be in Florida or Arizona. If they are less lucky they are in a nursing home or even on a park bench somewhere.

What has become of the American home when some of the younger folks (their children) don't want them?

I have nothing against day care centers, but it seems today, when a mother has to work, someone has to care for the children. It formerly was the grandparents. Fathers can abandon their family with little or no punishment, alimony doesn't exist, and the same goes for child support; the social agencies step in, place the child in a foster home or institution, and the taxpayers pay for it.

In the case of the aged, when they become a nuisance (real or imaginary), they are placed in the care of an institution whether the family can afford it or not.

A few decades ago, who would have ever thought that a teen-age girl (even without parental consent) could have what would eventually become a human life removed from her because she doesn't want to rear it or even put it up for adoption?

The time is past due when there should be a little more love in the home and more decency in humanity (which is even lacking in the U.S. Supreme Court in some of its past decisions).

We know, dear friends, that Communism can crush any country (including ours) by the destruction of family life—like Hitler's concentration camps and Marxism's creed of fidelity to the state before the family. Mao Tse-Tung's communes disunite the home and we have communes in America today in certain sects careful.

When the home goes, the nation goes and all our freedom with it. As we approach this Bicentennial, let's integrate it with the solidarity of the American home for the preservation of the generations yet unborn, who have a right to be born.

Sincerely yours,
EDWIN J. HIGBY

The Monopoly Game

WASHINGTON - On January 5 1904, a Quaker woman named Lizzie J. Magie was awarded patent number 740,626 for an invention called "The Landlord's Game." This game, according to Burton H. Wolfe (in copyrighted articles in The San Francisco Bay Guardian, April 23 and 30), is remarkably similar to the game of Monopoly which, as every good little capitalist schoolboy knows, was invented by Charles B. Darrow in 1913.

Wolfe writes that instead of Baltic and Pennsylvania Avenues and all the names familiar to every middle-class American child for the last 40-plus years, the real estate in Lizzie Magie's game had names like Poverty Place, Easy Street, Lord Blueblood Estates and the Soakum Lighting System. Wolfe says that Ms. Magie was a follower of Henry George, the late 19th century radical and single tax advocate, which would explain why you can buy your way out of jail under the rules of the game. She wanted to make The Landlord's Game as true to life and realistic as she could.

The news that Monopoly, the game that celebrates the more swinishly illegal aspects of our economic system, may have been invented by socialists comes as a result of several law suits. In 1973 Ralph Anspach, a professor of economics at San Francisco State University, began marketing something called Anti-Monopoly. The "Bust-The-Trust!" Game, and promptly got busted with a trademark infringement suit by Monopoly's manufacturers, Parker Brothers, which is subsidiary of the Fun Group Division of General Mills (1975 sales: $2,308,900,000).

The case is in litigation and a newspaper column is no place to pronounce judgment on such a complicated matter. It may turn out that General Mills and its Fun Group Division have clear title, but that doesn't make the depositions, as described by Wolfe, any less fascinating.

Whatever the reasons Lizzie Magie had for patenting her game, making money doesn't appear to have been one of them. She seems to have caught it to other Quakers, single taxers and people of a leftist ilk, one of whom was the well-known socialist economist Scott Nearing who, still living, says that he played it while a member of the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Finance around 1910. "The game was used to prove the anti-social nature of monopoly," Nearing wrote in a letter to Ralph Anspach.

As Wolfe has pieced together the game's history from the depositions and other documents of public record relating to the suits, The Landlord's Game was taken up by people in Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, New York and even Michigan and Indiana. In that era people made their own boards on linen or oil cloth and slowly changed the rules. As Lizzie Magie had invented the game the players couldn't buy the properties on the board, but somewhere in the Scott Nearing period the rule was changed so that a player could bid for them. The name got changed, too, from The Landlord's Game to Auction Monopoly and then to Monopoly.

Another player of that era was Rexford Guy Tugwell who would later become a close adviser of Franklin Roosevelt's and an important figure in the New Deal. One of Tugwell's students, Priscilla Robertson, gave Anspach a description of how folks thought of the game back then:

"It was considered a point of honor not to sell it to a commercial manufacturer, since it had been worked out by a group of single taxers who were anxious to defeat the capitalist system."

In the 1920s, however, a Daniel W. Layman Jr. had a company called Electronic Laboratories, Inc. manufacture sets of the game under the name of Finance. "I understood from various attorney friends of mine that because Monopoly had been used as the name of this exact game, both in Indianapolis and in Reading and in Williamstown, Mass., that it was, therefore, in public domain and I couldn't protect it in any way," Layman testified in his deposition. "So I changed the name in order to have some protection."

In the 1920s the names of the properties weren't standardized. People used street names from the locales they lived in, but Wolfe believes that the depositions show how the streets of Atlantic City were finally settled on. One of the people giving depositions even explained why Baltic and Mediterranean Avenues were selected as the cheapest properties with the lowest rents: "Because we had the nearest black woman named Clara Watson and I think a couple of others (blacks who lived there). That's a black area, Mediterranean and Bal tic."

Wolfe is able to offer an explanation as to why Marvin Gardens in the game isn't spelled as the real Marvin Gardens in Atlantic City. He uses the misspelling as evidence tending to show that Charles B. Darrow didn't invent Monopoly but copied it, misspelling and all, from others.

Hundreds of articles have appeared everywhere attributing the game to Darrow. Wolfe has only been able to find one giving Lizzie Magie credit. It appeared in The Washington Star on Jan. 28, 1936 with a headline reading: "DESIGNED TO TEACH - GAME OF MONOPOLY WAS FIRST KNOWN AS LANDLORD'S GAME."

Uranium Disappears

WASHINGTON — More than 200 pounds of highly enriched uranium, suitable for manufacturing bombs, disappeared from a Pennsylvania defense plant in the mid-1960s. No one is sure where it went.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has admitted only that 50 pounds of uranium disappeared. But secret documents reveal the loss was more than four times that amount.

It has been whispered in nuclear circles that the uranium was smuggled out of the country to help the Chinese or the Israelis detonate their first nuclear bombs. But this is pure speculation.

The fact is that no one knows what happened to the missing uranium. This raises some urgent questions about nuclear safeguards. An investigation by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., for example, has revealed that the safeguard-reporting system for nuclear facilities is totally inadequate.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission is supposed to keep track of the plutonium and bomb-grade uranium in this country. But no one monitors the NRC to make sure its figures are right.

NRC officials admit, for example, that they would not disclose the disappearance of plutonium from a nuclear plant — not even to Congress. It would be too risky, they claim. For an extortionist might learn how much plutonium was missing and use the figure in a phony blackmail attempt.

Not only does the NRC withhold nuclear information from Congress, but it cannot be sure the information is correct in the first place. For the NRC relies wholly on private companies to tell it whether plutonium is missing from their atomic plants.

The companies, not wishing to create trouble for themselves, are not always eager to disclose that they have lost some plutonium. At the Nuclear Fuel Services plant in Tennessee, for example, investigators alleged that the company was juggling its plutonium figures. The company has denied the charges, and the NRC is now investigating.

Even if the top corporate brass recognized the urgency of reporting the disappearance of plutonium at once, their subordinates may be reluctant to confess that they lost any plutonium. The plutonium inventories are prepared, of course, at the lower levels.

On top of all these problems, physical security at many nuclear plants is less than stringent. At the Kerr-McGee plant in Oklahoma, for example, one of the guards turned out to be a convicted felon working under an alias.

The same plant produced the first known case of plutonium smuggling. Plutonium was found in the apartment of Karen Silkwood, a Kerr-McGee employee. She was killed in an auto accident while on her way to discuss the lax Kerr-McGee safeguards with a reporter.

It wasn't until Ms. Silkwood's untimely death that Kerr-McGee officials discovered where some of their plutonium had disappeared. Earlier, they had shut down the plant twice because of the large amount of plutonium that had turned up missing.

The NRC itself is aware that the nuclear safeguards are woefully inadequate. A confidential memo, written by a high NRC official, calls urgently for tightening security at the nation's nuclear facilities. But the NRC has failed as yet to strengthen safeguards.

This attitude could lead to a national

MINOR WATERGATE: We recently reported that Federal Energy Administration official James Rubin had destroyed some embarrassing documents that were sought by a House Energy subcommittee.

The subcommittee is investigating the FEA's cozy relationship with the oil and gas industry. Rubin admitted to us that he had thrown out some documents to keep them out of congressional hands. He regretted his actions, he said.

But now a witness, who might be called to testify before the subcommittee, has charged that Rubin tried to intimidate her. The witness, FEA employee Cathy Hamilton, alleges that Rubin approached her in the hallway and asked whether she was going to testify.

When she answered in the affirmative, she swears Rubin told her: "I just want to warn you that if you do, you might lose your job."

Rubin vigorously denies making the threat. He contends that he merely offered her some friendly advice on testifying. "I told her to tell the truth," Rubin said.

BLACK MARKET: U.S. embassy officials, it now develops, engaged in illegal profiteering on the Chilean black market during the brief regime of the late President Salvador Allende.

This was called to our attention by Richard Fagen, a Stanford University professor, who worked for the Ford Foundation in Chile during the Allende years. He said John Tipton, an embassy official, offered to help him exchange his U.S. dollars on the black market if he would give him information about a left-wing political group. Fagen was familiar with the group.

Tipton acknowledged that he had made the proposition to Fagen. More than 90 per cent of all foreign citizens in Chile, including U.S. embassy personnel, cashed their personal checks on the illegal market, Tipton said.

Berry's World

"I'll bet our Bicentennial was ten times better than their Bicentennial."

She Called Herself Mata Hari

The milkmen and the factory women heard the crack of rifles. It was like breaking an obstinate stick. The women blessed themselves and hurried through the misty dawn. Mata Hari was dead.

She was an old spy at 41. She had been bought and paid for by the Germans. In the line of duty, she slept with the French. She made love as though it was the final ecstasy and patriotism had nothing to do with her work.

Mata Hari despised men. If, by passing secret information from France to Germany, she could cause 50,000 men to die in battle, the lady was pleased. It hardly mattered which side lost them.

She was born in Holland. Her true name was Margaretha Geertruida Zelle. At 18, she had hair like shiny coal, eyes like a midnight sky, and skin like rippling molasses. All of it fell under the eye of a man named a sadist.

He was Capt. Campbell McLeod, an Englishman serving in Java. He met her parents, romanced the girl with stories of the Dutch East Indies, and married her. On the ship rolling to Djakarta through tropical seas, Captain McLeod beat his bride at his pleasure.

In Java, she gave birth to a son. A nurse poisoned it. Margaretha strangled the nurse and hid the body. When a daughter, Banda, was born, the Dutch girl turned to other men.

Whatever she had to offer is known only by dead men. It was enough to make slaves of majors and ministers. She shackled them, and ignored them. Margaretha smiled when they begged.

McLeod took his wife and Banda back to Rotterdam. The Dutch wife left the little girl with her family, and went to Paris. She introduced herself as a Hindu Brahman. Her name, she said, was Mata Hari: "Eye of the Dawn."

She danced in elite nightclubs. She wore gossamer veils, and dropped them one by one. In 1907, it was shocking to see a nude woman dancing. She wasn't any nude woman. There was something in that body as sinuous in its movements as an anaconda.

Mata Hari became a Parisian hit. The rich rousé made presents of elaborate apartments, carriages, matched horses, sparkling gems. Her picture was in newspapers all over Europe.

She had lovers: Monsieur Jules Cam-bron, Ministry of Foreign Affairs; the Crown Prince of Germany; French Minister of War Messimy; most important, Herr von Jagow, German Foreign Minister.

It was he who suggested that Mata Hari could earn millions by spying on France. She thought it over. Mata Hari was 35; old for a sexy dancer. She agreed.

Before World War I began in 1914, the lady was in bed with many French generals and war ministers. Gently, she teased, she tortured until the gentlemen told her all the things they were sure she would not understand.

When war broke out between Germany and France, she sent her secrets through neutral Holland. She warned von Jagow that the British had invented a "land ship of steel." This was the first tank. She told of a French offensive, where, when, what day. Two hundred thousand men were killed or sustained wounds.

Mata Hari smiled. The French implored her to spy for them. She agreed, took their money, and fed them information they already had. In 1917, the Germans feared that Mata Hari was dangerous.

They sent her a big check, and allowed the French to intercept it. She was arrested. In July, 1917, she stood haughtily before seven French officers to be court-martialed. The prosecutor-officer proved that she had sold secrets to the Germans. "This - this woman," he shouted, "cost at least 50,000 Frenchmen their lives."

Mata Hari was found guilty. She was sentenced to death and thrown into St. Lazare prison. Her old attorney, Monsieur Clunet, begged her to be of good cheer. The French would not shoot a pregnant woman; he would volunteer to make her pregnant.

Mata Hari declined. She was attended by two nuns. All she had left was a fur coat. She understood Frenchmen, she said. She would go out into the prison yard and face the firing squad without a blindfold. When the officer said, "Ready, aim...." Mata Hari would throw open the coat.

They could not defile that body with bullets. On October 15, 1917, at 5:15 a.m., she walked out to a splintered post. Outside the walls, the factory women heard the rifles. They blessed themselves...

HHH Ties President, But Leads Ron Reagan

By George Gallup
PRINCETON, N.J. — Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota is in a virtual tie with President Gerald Ford in the latest nationwide test election and holds a lead over former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Despite his non-candidate status, Humphrey continues to figure prominently in speculation over the 1976 race for the Democratic nomination.

Humphrey wins 46 per cent to Ford's 45 per cent and leads Reagan, 52 to 42 per cent. As reported Democratic candidate Jimmy Carter holds wide leads over both Ford (52 to 40 per cent) and Reagan (55 to 37 per cent).

Test elections during January showed Humphrey and Ford to be in close contention. In February and March, the President opened up a slight lead. Sen. Humphrey, however, closed the gap in April.

In two previous Humphrey-Reagan test elections this year, neither man had been able to establish a clear lead or win a majority of the vote.

Here are the questions asked:
Suppose the presidential election were being held today. If President Gerald Ford were the Republican candidate and Sen. Hubert Humphrey were the Democratic candidate, which would you like to see win? (The same question was asked posing Ronald Reagan as the Republican candidate.)

Following are the latest results of the Humphrey-Ford trial heat and the trend:

The Hays Affair...Congress Must Act

WASHINGTON — The Wayne Hays affair is an internal scandal that Congress cannot afford to sweep under the rug.

Capitol Hill is in a turmoil over the report that Rep. Hays, R.-Ohio, one of the most powerful men in the House, wasted taxpayers' money to provide a $14,000-a-year job for a woman who says she was paid to be his mistress and do no work.

Hays' alleged infidelity to a wife of five weeks makes for juicy gossip, and as Newsweek announced in its cover story last week, gossip is currently highly fashionable. But Hays' sexual morality is nobody's business but his unfortunate wife's.

Corrupt House?

The real issue here is his basic honesty. Political abuse of public funds for personal gain is a serious problem. The voters want to be rid of the steal-and-lie system that characterized the Watergate era. The Hays case raises questions of possible internal corruption that Congress simply cannot ignore.

Hays happens to be the most disliked and feared chairman in the House. But it was Congress itself that made it possible for him to become what he is. Over the years, House members have meekly delegated such vast authority to Hays that he controls the entire congressional payroll, including the allocation of such favors as travel allowances and parking places. Few congressmen have dared to risk his wrath; he was the only major chairman last year to survive a Democratic caucus challenge against his leadership.

Hays has thrived because of the persistent lack of strong, central congressional leadership and the traditional self-protective tendency of members to cover up for each other.

Now, however, he has torn it. Within a day of the report on Hays, congressional offices were drafting defensive letters to reply to an expected flood of angry protests from constituents. The House leadership began conferring secretly to debate possible action.

"I'm furious at what he's done to us," a Capitol Hill veteran raged. "It gives us all a bad name. We spend long hours and work hard for little pay and now everybody is going to say we all spend our time doing our fingernails."

The House can take any one of several possible routes for reprimanding members. The House Democratic caucus is not scheduled to meet again until mid-June but it could easily call a special session.

The House Accounts Subcommittee, chaired by Rep. Frank Thompson, D.-N.J., has authority to probe abuse of public funds. It is the same subcommittee which some years back made the initial study of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell's spending that led to formation of a select investigating committee and eventually Powell's censorship.

Half-Hearted Probers

The House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, commonly known as the ethics committee, also has power to investigate if so moved. Its early reaction, however, was to duck the issue. The committee is currently engaged in a half-hearted probe into allegations of conflict of interest against Rep. Robert Sikes, R.-Fla. The committee has been putting on a delicate performance that has given rise to suspicions it does not intend to make a serious investigation into Sikes' conduct, but the Hays disclosures may increase the pressure to avoid any whitewash.

Congress does not like to concede that one of its own might need disciplining. Only well-publicized and flagrant problems provoke serious attention. The tragic disgrace of Wilbur Mills, for instance, was politely ignored, on the grounds that alcoholism is a matter for constituents to approve or disapprove, not the official congressional machinery.

But Congress is in low esteem, and failure to face up to the Hays problem would inevitably create an impression that all incumbents condone, if not actually practice similar bad habits. This is

Why Is Barry So Upset?

Nobody has been able to explain Sen. Barry Goldwater's sudden denunciation of Ronald Reagan for making an issue of Secretary of State Kissinger's semi-secret maneuvering to "give the Panama Canal away" to a local dictator who makes common cause with Cuba's Marxist tyrant Fidel Castro. It doesn't consort with anything Goldwater has done or said in all his years in public life.

The curious thing about it is that Ronald Aeggan has been basing his "stand up for America" foreign policy speeches on Goldwater's own past statements. In the case of Panama, Goldwater was vehement as far back as 1962 against compromising our sovereign rights to exclusive control of the Canal Zone, which we had acquired by the original canal treaty of 1901.

"Does anyone seriously suppose," he wrote in his "Why Not Victory?" treatise, "that our generous decision to permit the Panamanian flag to fly over American territory in the Canal Zone will placate the Panamanian nationalists? The gesture is bound simply to whet the mob's appetite and transfer its sights to bigger targets."

Ahead of His Time

Goldwater was a farsighted man back in 1962. For example, the fact that we lacked a satisfactory African policy was obvious to Goldwater even then. Kissinger's misguided attempt to improvise a policy during his recent African tour came exactly 14 years after Goldwater's suggestion that we take the lead in forming "an interim African protectorate administered by an association of Western nations."

GOLDWATER admitted that the formation of such a protectorate would be denounced as "chauvinistic and oppressive." But he warned that "we cannot acquiesce in independence movements where independence means Communist domination or a return to savagery. Nor can we afford to jump on the bandwagon of anti-colonialism and so accelerate that mad rush toward anarchy and Soviet peonage... We should hold on to Africa, in part, because Western survival there is essential to victory over Communism, but no less because we know that the privilege of being born in the West carries with it the responsibility of extending our good fortune to others."

Partial Acceptance

What Kissinger did in his Southern African rambles was to ignore the "return to savagery" phrase in Barry Goldwater's prophetic warning. The "responsibility of extending our good fortune to others" would be rudely abnegated were we to turn over funds to the savage Marxist dictatorship in Mozambique to sustain guerrilla operations against the Ian Smith regime in Rhodesia.

True enough, the Rhodesian whites have been laggard in their willingness to speed the coming of majority black rule in their territory. But there is no apartheid in Rhodesia, and blacks who have been able to comply with educational and property qualifications are even now part of a government that is ready to expand the franchise provided that minority rights (in this case "white rights") are constitutionally guaranteed for the long future.

Goldwater, in 1962, anticipated every point that Pat

Moynihan raised during the short period of his invigorating ambassadorship to the UN.

"At the outset," so Barry wrote, "we failed to recognize the true intents of the Communists in and out of the UN. We saw them as ex-comrades in arms and as brethren of the peace who would sit around a conference table in a true spirit of give-and-take, helping solve the problems of the world. We have found since, to the world's regret, that their intransigence has made impossible of achievement most of the UN's original goals... The important development at the UN as not been what Communism has done with its right hand... but what Communism has accomplished with its left — the successful campaign to get the current Soviet foreign-policy line endorsed by a bloc of allegedly neutral nations. Messrs. Tito, Nkrumah, Sukarno, Nehru, and Nasser... became a kind of phony 'centrist' bloc whose favor we found ourselves earnestly courting. This was a bizarre indication that the power center of the United Nations had moved sharply to the left."

Substitute some "successor names" for those of Nkrumah, Nehru and Nasser, and the Goldwater indictment of UN "centrist" domination still holds.

The Reagan speechwriters have simply carried forward the Goldwater foreign policy proposals of 1962 into the Reagan Republican primary campaign of 1976. As the "father" of Reagan's "stand up for America" policy, Barry Goldwater should be an intensely proud parent. Instead, he seems to resent what his "son" has been doing to prove the old man's prescience.

It's crazy, but that's the way things are.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

The first warship to sail under U.S. orders, the "Hannah", sailed out to attack British shipping in September, 1775. The sloop, offered by Massachusetts merchant Col. John Glover, was fitted for guns and a crew was selected from Glover's 21st Regiment. The ship, commissioned by Washington, was ordered to seize enemy ships carrying contraband. On Sept. 7, the Hannah put in at Gloucester with its first prize. Prodded by John Adams, and Hannah's success, Congress authorized the first ships of the U.S. Navy on Oct. 13, 1775. KHS Band At UCCC Rites

Stone Ridge — The Kingston High School band will provide the music for the 12th Commencement at Ulster County Community College which will be held Sunday, June 6, according to George Vizvary, chairman of the graduation committee. The graduation, which will begin at 4 p. m. will be held outdoors on the plaza in front of the MacDonnell DeWitt Library on the Stone Ridge campus. In case of inclement weather, the ceremony will be moved to the nearby Senate gymnasium. The Kingston Band is directed by Anthony J. Hummel, a Columbia University graduate, who has been at Kingston High School for the past six years. Hummel received his Bachelor of Science degree from Potsdam and his M. A. Degree from Columbia. This year, the band has performed at the home football games, the May Day ceremonies, the Lion's Exposition and a combined concert which was held in February.

Paltz Outreach Program

NEW PALTZ — Instruction in high school equivalency, basic adult education, reading, math and English as a second language is available in free adult education classes co-sponsored by the Department of Secondary Education, State University College at New Paltz, and the Mid-Hudson School Study Council. A unique aspect of the program is the "outreach program," designed for students unable to come to the centers in Highland, Plattekill, New Paltz or Rosendale. Persons not able to travel to any center on a regular basis may arrange for classes in their own homes. Several "outreach" classes have already started and have proved to be successful. Those interested in attending classes or starting an outreach program in their own homes are asked to call the college Monday through Friday between 9:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Bloomington Girl Held Captive in Chains

KINGSTON — A 14-year-old Bloomington girl was held captive in chains, a 52-bike motorcycle gang blocked Route 32 in New Paltz and a number of drunken driving arrests and accidents were reported in Ulster County during Memorial Day weekend.

The young girl, whose name was withheld because of her age, was reportedly found by Ulster County Sheriff Department deputies Monday afternoon with a 20-pound, nine-foot length of tow chain wrapped around her neck and secured with a padlock.

A neighbor allegedly reported the incident to the police who found the girl at the Bloomington home. She told Sgt. David Hughes and Deputy Emile Kuhn, that the chain was wrapped around her father in an attempt to "keep her from going out."

The father, John A. Plonski, appeared before Rosendale Town Justice Albert Morelli and was released in his own recognizance. Juvenile Aid Bureau Director Thomas Johnson said the girl was returned to the custody of her mother, who was reportedly at a Memorial Day parade in Kingston at the time of the incident.

Police notified New York State Child Abuse Division which in turn notified Myra DuBois, investigator for Ulster

County Child Abuse Division. Plonski was scheduled to appear before Family Court Judge Bernard Feeney today.

Sheriff Thomas Mayone said today he "would not tolerate a continuation" of motorcycle gangs blocking highways in Ulster County as has occurred recently in Dutchess and Rockland counties. Sheriff deputies, when notified at 2:30 a.m. Monday, that the "motor heads" a locally-based gang known as "The Breed" were blocking Route 32 in the Village of New Paltz, cautioned the group and "moved them out," according to Johnson.

A Kerhonkson man sustained a broken leg in a motorcycle-truck accident Sunday on Askohan Road, Marletown.

Hurley State Police report that Gordon Churchwell, 17, of RD 1, Kerhonkson, failed to negotiate a curve and was in collision with a truck operated by Benjamin Noble, 21, of RD

1, West Hurley. The owner of the motorcycle, Kenneth Rapoport of RD 3, Kingston, was ticketed for allowing an unlicensed operator to drive his bike. Churchwell was also ticketed and taken to Kingston Hospital by Marletown Rescue Squad.

Craig D. Robinson of Kingston, who sustained head lacerations at 5:04 p.m. Monday on the Sawkill Road, when his vehicle hit two telephone poles, was arrested by Hurley State Police for driving while intoxicated.

Robinson was taken to Benedictine Hospital in Paltz by Ambulance. Trooper Ronald Marek investigated the accident which took place one-half mile south of Route 209.

A felony arrest for allegedly driving while intoxicated was made by Ulster County Sheriff Department 12:30 a.m. Sunday, who found George Van Dyke, 46, of 56 Van Buren Street, traveling in an erratic manner on Abeel Street.

Arraigned before Eapous Town Justice Robert Jordan, he was found to be driving while his license was revoked. He was released on $1,500 bail.

New Paltz Police report a drunken driving arrest Monday at 2:5 p.m. when a Williston Park man, Reed Schwartz, 20, was found allegedly driving in a reckless manner on Route 299 while his operator's license was suspended. He was committed to Ulster County Jail in lieu of $200 bail, pending a June 4 appearance in justice court.

Ellenville State Police arrested a 17-year-old Napanoch woman Sunday and charged her with grand larceny in the third degree.

Jacqueline Jacobson, was charged with alleged theft May 23 of a motorcycle from a storage building. The 1975 vehicle reportedly belonged to Veronica Countryman of Kripplush Road, Accord. Trooper Richard Snyder and Investigator Robert Greaves made the arrest.

Garden Club Gala at DAR Chapter House

Veteran Gardener Receives First Best in Show Award

By Marianne Darrow
Special Correspondent
HURLEY — After entering flower shows regularly since 1935, Mrs. George (Myrtle) Brown of Hurley not only won her first blue ribbon, but swept all the honors at the Bicentennial show of the Little Gardens Club last week. Entitled, "Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness," the standard placement show was held in the DAR Chapter House in Kingston, Thursday, May 20.

As Mrs. Dean Kintner remarked, "Myrtle's the star of this show!" but she meant Mrs. Brown, not the popular ground cover! Myrtle Brown's arrangement, "Justice for All," using the scales of justice, was the Best in Show, the first Tricolor Award. The judges tacked the award of horticultural excellence when they saw the burgeoning pot of English ivy which trailed green leaves to the floor, and adorned Myrtle's blue phlox and allium with blue ribbons, making a first place appearance in spite of the "absolutely awful spring growing season," as one member remarked.

year member, explained that the members respect Myrtle's know-how and her willingness to help anyone. Her civic planning efforts through the years having been many. Added Mrs. Landers, "We just appreciate Myrtle!" which about summed up the attitude of the pleased members that afternoon.

When the flurry of all the excitement had calmed down, Myrtle, changed from hoop skirts into a pantsuit, said that she really has no "secret" of her horticultural successes. She calls herself a "dirt gardener" who just loves to spend her days outdoors putting and just "growing things."

Life

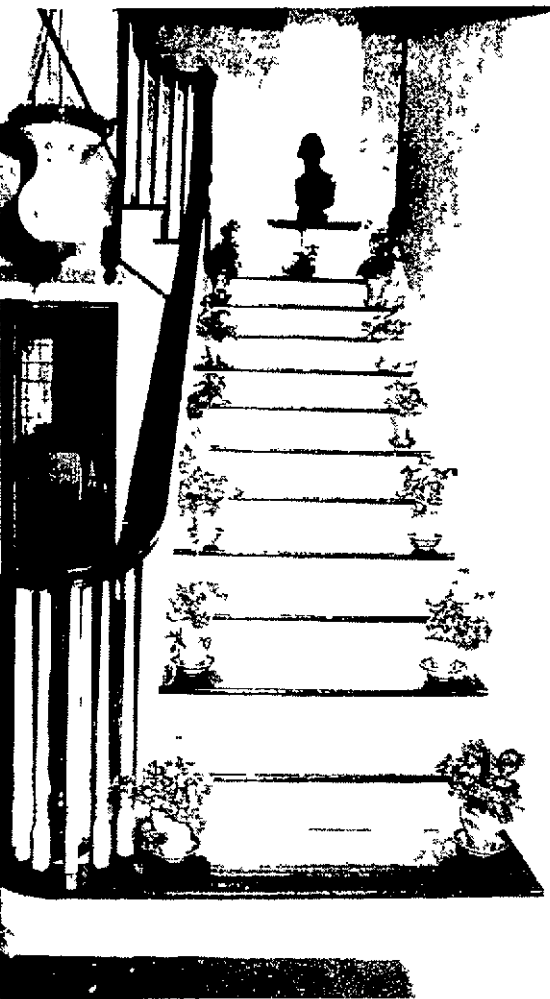

Myrtle Brown described the artistic side of gardening - flower arranging - as the "icing on the cake." When asked about the massive pot of ivy she said, "Oh, that! I have to put it into an eight-inch pot for the show, so I just repot it every year. It just keeps on growing!" The closest Myrtle Brown came to divulging any secrets of gardening success was the advice to indoor or outdoor buffs, "Not too much, too soon!"

Well-known Kingston historian Harry Rigby cut the ribbon to open the show, appropriately, with a pair of garden shears. Inside, pairs of potted bright red geraniums stood on each step of the black-painted staircase, while each room held arrangements which exhibitors considered appropriate to the place and time, ranging from colonial to Victorian America. Flowers ran the gamut from the bright orange poppies over the mantel in the kitchen to the assortment of wildflowers (not weeds!) which were massed over the mantel in the living room.

In addition to Garden club members, hostesses who helped at the afternoon show from the DAR were Mrs. Wilfred Robinson, Regent, Mrs. Sanford Cross, hostess chairman of Walking Tours, Mrs. Mildred Blaine, Mrs. Willard Burke, Mrs. George Dingee, Mrs. Harry Rigby and Mrs. Floyd Ellsworth.

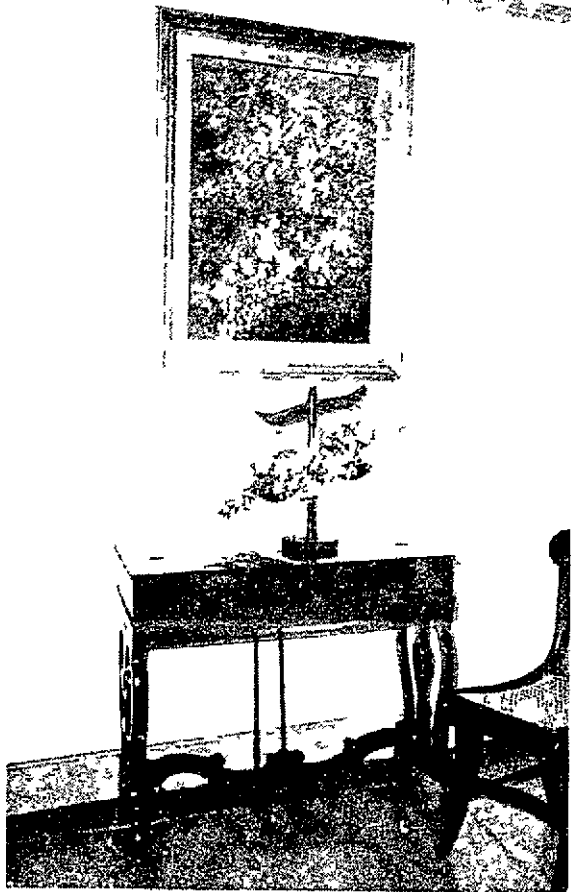

Garden club member Mrs. David Fox received as many compliments for her lacy handmade mob-cap as she did for her arrangements.

POTS OF BRIGHT RED GERANIUMS decorated the staircase at the DAR Chapter House during the Little Gardens Club of Kingston Bicentennial show. (Landers Photos)

With everyone in early Colonial dresses, it was as if Mrs. Early America had been crowned when the judges announced the first place awards. Myrtle Brown broke into tears, and so did all of the other members of the Little Gardens Club who have been working side by side with Myrtle through years of garden shows.

Mrs. Everett Landers, a 10-

"BEST IN SHOW" WINNER of the Tri-color award, "Justice for All" arranged by Mrs. George Brown of Hurley.

ARRANGEMENTS APPROPRIATE to time and place included the flowers in the candle mold on the mantel of the fireplace and the arrangements in antique pitchers on the deep window sills of the DAR Chapter House at the show of the Little Gardens Club of Kingston. The tri-color award winner, Justice for All, by Mrs. George Brown of Hurley, is on the table in the left rear corner.

KINGSTON 338-1000

There is Celebration in the air at Woodstock Artists Association. IBM has granted $2000 from its Fund for Community Services, to make possible the second part of the plan for a permanent collection of works by Woodstock artists who have made American Art History. The grant will make possible the construction of a modern, air-conditioned vault for storing the masterpieces which will be readily available for occasional rotating shows. The association was fortunate to have the services, enthusiasm and persistent devotion to the idea of Eliot Gruenberg, second from right, in working for the Permanent Collection. Shown with Gruenberg from left are Albert Handell, Aileen Cramer, and Carolyn Wilson. The construction of the storage vault was supported supported on a matching basis by the Federal Endowment for the Arts.

Cleaning the Closet Is a Trip Back In Time Tunnel

I wanted to switch the wardrobe in my husband's closet from winter to summer last week, but he was wearing it.

To look in his closet you'd think he had a change for all seasons. But as the kids said one day, "You are now landing in Daddy's closet. Please turn your watches back 20 years."

As I picked my way through the rack of clothes I had to admit it was like a Bicentennial salute to the history of men's clothes. He had a necktie that dated back to the Hoover administration.

There was one suit that had come in style, gone out again, and was coming in again.

Then I did a thing I had not done in our entire married life. I cleaned out his closet.

Out went the Hans Brinker pants that remained standing when he sat down.

Out went the gold coat sweater that he held together by hooking a moth hole over the button.

Out went the ankle-length winter coat that made him look like a rabbit out of "Fiddler on the Roof."

Out went the belt that fit him when he and his waist were both 28.

Out went the X-rated bathing suit that used to be a PG.

Out went the sports coat with the Ruptured Duck Discharge pin still on the lapel.

Out went the loafers with the original pennies on them.

Out went the sweatshirt that read, "KILROY WAS HERE!"

Out went the seersucker bathrobe with a copy of Boy's Life in the pocket.

Out went the wading boots with the hole in the toe.

Out went the undergraduate warm-up jacket that no longer fit over the postgraduate stomach.

I knew he had discovered my "surprise" when he raged into the kitchen shouting, "What happened to all my clothes? There's nothing in my closet except two shirts, a card table, and a carton of cancelled checks. What did you do with them?"

"They are in a big truck on their way to the Salvation Army."

"Well that's just great. I don't go on your side of the closet and clean house. From here on in — STAY OUT OF MY CLOTHES!"

Such a big deal over nothing. Today, the truck brought his clothes back. I figured they would

THE D and H CANAL SOCIETY will feature the Lawrenceville area in its monthly canal walk, Saturday, June 5. The walk, led by Jim Powers, preservation chairman, will start at the Lawrenceville Bridge between High Falls and Rosendale on Route 213 at 9 a.m. and cover about a mile into an old canal settlement along the towpath. The walk will culminate in lunch at Lawrenceville Manor on the Rondout Creek. Walkers are reminded to wear sturdy shoes, suitable clothing and bring cameras, binoculars, and lunch. (Cricket Hill Studios)

Kingston Resident's Drama To Have First Local Airing June 2

By Marianne Darrow
Special Correspondent

KINGSTON — Antique dealer Fred Johnston's interest in the past has led him into a brand new field — writing for television. His historical drama, "A Gift From A Stranger," now in the hands of a television producer in California, will have the first local airing on Wednesday, June 2 in West Hurley. Members and friends of the Old Dutch Church have been invited to hear Johnston's tape recorded narration of the drama at the picnic supper at the Holly Hill Drive home of Mr. and Mrs. Morton D. Alling III.

The story, with a secret surprise ending, deals with a boy from Kingston, his father, mother and two sisters, a Hudson River sloop captain, the Domine of the Old Dutch Church and the Stranger. The boy, named Derek Wynkoop in the dramatization, leaves with his father in October 1777 to defend Fort Montgomery on the Hudson. They then go to Valley Forge where the boy shares the misery and suffering of that bitter winter for the troops. Determined to be home by Christmas, the boy leaves Valley Forge a week before the holiday, on foot, through the rugged winter.

As the drama unfolds, Derek, after spending the night in Hurley, trudges through a blizzard into Kingston, seeing just dimly through the falling snow that the village has been burned. He runs down the hill to the burnt-out hulk of his home on Christmas Eve.

And that is where author Fred Johnston leaves his synopsis of "A Gift" except to add that Christmas Eve 1777 will have a deep spiritual meaning since the Stranger, the Domine and the Old Dutch Church have important roles.

Fred Johnston wrote this story about a year ago Christmas at his home in Key West, Florida. The situation is imaginary, but Johnston has based the play on an item he read in a letter which told about the Christmas following the burning of the city by the British in 1777.

Dear Abby

How to Deal With Mrs. Busybody

DEAR ABBY: I am going into the hospital for four or five days to have silicone breast implants. A good friend of mine who is also my neighbor has offered to look after my two children during the day in her home.

My problem is another neighbor who is in and out of my house several times a day. She is quite a busybody, and I don't want her to know where I am and why.

I've thought of telling her I'm going to visit my mother who lives out of the state, but then she'd wonder why I wouldn't be taking my preschooler. I could also tell her I'm going to the hospital for a D and C.

Or I could just leave and not tell her anything, but she would see my husband taking my kids to my neighbor's house and back, and she'd be sure to ask him where I was.

The neighbor who is caring for my children knows the facts and can be trusted not to say anything, but I don't want Mrs. Busybody to know. What should I tell her?—WANTS PRIVACY

DEAR WANTS: Tell her you're going to the hospital for minor surgery. Period (P.S. And if she presses for more information, tell her it's a personal matter.)

DEAR ABBY: In response to DISGUSTED IN CHICAGO, who complained about the service in a restaurant: No! Working toward the door without paying will not do it.

Last year, my husband and I waited one-half hour for the bill in a fashionable Palm Springs restaurant. In desperation, my husband finally went to get the waitress himself. She said she'd be right over.

We waited for another 15 minutes, and he again went looking for her and saw her through the kitchen window talking to the help. Finally, after waiting for another 15 minutes, we got up and stood by the exit door for five minutes. Everyone was looking at us and knew what we had in mind, but when the waitress still didn't come, we walked out without paying our bill for $26.

It was not even a busy evening. I hope she had to pay for our bill. What would you have done?—MADELEINE

DEAR MADELEINE: I'd have located the manager, paid my bill (sans tip) and told him why he shouldn't expect to see us again.

DEAR ABBY: A quote from your column, "Violence begets violence," calls to mind the words of the late Martin Luther King Jr. (from his book, "Stride Toward Freedom"): "To retaliate in kind would do nothing but intensify the existence of hate in the universe. Along the way of life, someone must have sense enough and morality enough to cut off the chain of hate."

Thanks for trying, Abby.—YOUR MEMPHIS ADMIRER

Up, Up And Away They Went, Some to Return

STONE RIDGE — Up, up and away went 500 helium-filled balloons. Launched along with a wide variety of flyable items at last week's annual fly-in in High Falls, the balloons proved the big hit of a highly successful day.

In every color of the rainbow and bearing identification tags of the youngsters sending them aloft, the balloons floated high above the tree tops and out of sight. With them went the hopes of those who had released them that they'd be found by someone many miles away.

Five-year-old Mark Green, son of Charles and Bonnie Green of Candlewood Drive, Stone Ridge, was not disappointed with the performance of his balloon. Mrs. Charles Diamond of Greenport, L. I. spotted the pink bauble while walking along the beach. She wrote him that his balloon, launched Sunday, had made its way back to earth, more than 100 miles away, by Tuesday.

For Mark and other youngsters who received letters from almost equal distances, the High Falls fly-in was an event to be remembered.

KINGSTON—With pomp and parade, guns and bells, Memorial Day was solemnized from one end of Ulster and Dutchess counties to another. Parades and memorial services honoring the dead of all wars were held on Sunday and Monday.

Kingston's parade was big and colorful, tied up traffic for blocks and was viewed by thousands. Stepping off Monday afternoon, seven divisions strong, from Kingston High School, it wended its way down Broadway, past the reviewing stand at Elmendorf Street, and on to Dietz Stadium by way of Albany and Clinton Avenues and North Front Street.

Speaking at pre-parade ceremonies at the Veterans Memorial on Broadway was Mayor Francis R. Koenig. Also speaking was Grand Marshal Alex Banashke, a survivor of the infamous Bataan March during World War II. Banashke's address was highly critical of those working for total amnesty for men who left the country to avoid service in Vietnam.

In Hurley, a Bicentennial flavor was added to Monday's parade in the Colonial uniforms of the color guard and "Spirit of '76" of Hurley Memorial Post 5088, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

In Saugerties, flags flew from private residences and businesses; bands, drum and bugle corps, civic organizations and fire companies joined in the big parade; and Ulster County Historian Harry Rigby was the guest speaker.

Meanwhile, across the river in Hyde Park, a long tradition was continued with memorial services under the auspices of the National Park Service and the local Historical Association. Among the speakers were Gary E. Everhardt, National Park Service director, who addressed his remarks to the Bicentennial, and Robert M. Morgenthau, District Attorney of New York County, who gave the memorial address.

Ellenville's parade featured the local high school band; had Rep. Matthew F. McHugh of the 27th Congressional District as featured speaker.

In Woodstock, Ontario's award-winning marching band was cheered along the parade route. Music for Port Ewen's parade was furnished by the Kingston Junior Indians and the Miller and Port Ewen Schools bands. Marlboro's parade included colorful floats; Kerhonkson's parade had a Civil War touch in the Union uniforms of grand marshals Seward Osborne Jr. and Robert Sickler; and in Olivebridge, a parade was bypassed this year and memorial services featured Ernest J. Gardner, majority leader of the Ulster County Legislature, as speaker.

Just Another Win For Doc Medich

NEW YORK (UPI) — It wasn't as satisfying as beating the New York Yankees but George "Doc" Medich will take the victory just the same.

Medich, who toiled for the Yankees at Shea Stadium last year before being dealt to Pittsburgh during the off-season, tossed a five-hitter at the New York Mets in his return to Shea Monday to give the Pirates a 2-1 victory over New York and a split of a doubleheader.

The Mets got a combined six runs batted in from reserve infielders Mike Phillips and Wayne Garrett to back the five-hit pitching of Jon Matlack in posting a 13-2 victory in the opener.

"If it were the Yankees it would be different because I have a lot of friends on that ball club," explained Medich. "But against the Mets it's almost another ball game. But I like coming back to New York. It's a good place and a good time to see all my old friends."

Medich struck out eight and walked two but lost his bid for a shutout with two out in the ninth inning when catcher Ron Hodges hit a home run.

"I've had good stuff every time out this year," said Medich, who evened his record at 4-4. "I've only hurt myself once in a game, when I didn't field a grounder and it cost me four runs. I don't think anybody likes to be a .500 pitcher but it could be worse."

Dave Parker lashed a run-scoring single to get Pittsburgh on the board in the first and Duffy Dyer clouted his second home run of the season in the second to provide the margin of victory off Met starter and loser Bob Apodaca.

Phillips, subbing for injured shortstop Bud Harrelson, lofted a sacrifice fly in the second inning of the first game and then chased Jerry Reuss, now 5-4, with a two-run single in a six-run fourth inning.

Garrett, playing second in place of sidelined Felix Millan, singled home two runs in the fourth inning and one more against reliever Ramon Hernandez in a five-run fifth.

Ted Turner, the Atlanta Braves' flamboyant sportsman-owner, is so eager for a winner that he's willing to let the fans watch now and pay later.

"Heartbroken" when the San Diego Padres rallied for a 10-7 victory over the Braves Monday night, Turner announced over the public address system at Atlanta Stadium that the 2,994 fans all would be admitted free to Tuesday's game with their rainchecks.

"They will continue to get in free as long as the Braves continue on their losing streak," Turner emphasized. "This offer is good until they win a game."

Turner, whose whirlwind leadership since taking over the Braves rivals anything such famed promoters as Bill Veeck and Larry MacPhail did during their careers, insisted he wasn't trying to embarrass the players.

"Did I make the offer out of disgust?" he said, repeating a question asked by a newsmen. "No, not at all. It was out of heartbreak. This is so heartbreaking that I shed a few tears. That's why I asked the fans to stick with us. We're going to win one of these days."

The Braves, who earlier lost 13 games in a row, suffered their fourth straight loss Monday night when the Padres scored six runs in the eighth inning. The Padres trailed 7-4 going into the eighth but reliever Adrian Devine walked Jerry Turner and Merv Rettenmund and shortstop Marty Perez let a routine grounder go through for an error that enabled a run to score.

Ted Kubiak's single and Luis Melendez' sacrifice fly produced two more runs and then Dave Winfield homered deep into the left field stands. Rick Folkers, who pitched the last two innings, received credit for the victory while Max Leon was the loser.

Philadelphia defeated Chicago 4-1 after a 7-5 defeat. Cincinnati beat Houston 4-2, and San Francisco whipped Los Angeles 7-1 in 12 innings in the other National League games. St. Louis at Montreal was rained out.

Cubs 7-1, Phillies 5-4

Run-scoring singles by Mick Kelleher and winning pitcher Rick Reuschel gave the Cubs a 3-1 lead in the seventh and they added three more in the eighth of the first game. Reuschel picked up his fifth win and Steve Carlton suffered his second loss. Jim Kaat pitched a six-hitter and hit his first NL homer in leading the Phils to their second-game triumph.

Reds 4, Astros 2

George Foster hit his ninth homer following a walk to Pete Rose and a triple by Joe Morgan as the Reds scored three runs in the fifth inning. Pat Darcy went five innings to win his second game while J.R. Richard was the loser.

Giants 7, Dodgers 1

Bobby Murcer doubled in two runs and Ken Reitz singled in two more as the Giants scored six runs in the 12th inning for their victory at Los Angeles. Dodger relief ace Mike Marshall was the victim of the rally, yielding six hits and all six runs.

Yanks Had It Easy...On the Field

BOSTON (UPI) — Cherry bombs exploded on the playing field and New York outfielders had to dodge golf balls and close their ears to abusive remarks Monday night at Fenway Park.

In comparison with the going over they took from the 35,939 fans, the Yankees had an easy night of baseball—accepting an 8-3 victory handed them by the Boston Red Sox Sox.

The contest, the first of a four-game set between the American League East leaders and defending league champions, drew the largest crowd in 20 years as well as a national television audience. It was the first meeting of the two clubs in Boston and the Red Sox fans wanted to retaliate for a brawl that took place May 20 in Yankee Stadium.

Boston pitchers Ferguson Jenkins and Jim Willoughby combined for three wild pitches, catcher Bob Montgomery was guilty of a passed ball that resulted in three unearned runs in the third inning, outfielder Fred Lynn misplayed a fly into a run-scoring double and the Yankees stole three bases.

"One reason we're winning is because we want to win," said winning pitcher Catfish Hunter. "We have good ballplayers playing together. When you want to win, you put out a little extra all the time."

Boston Manager Darrell Johnson, disregarding the theory that his team is not putting out as it could, found something positive to say.

"The last 10 days, our pitching's been far more consistent and if we can step up our run production, we'll start winning."

The Red Sox, however, didn't get consistent pitching Monday night and failed to drive across more than three runs for the eighth straight game. Since beating New York 7-6 on May 23, the Red Sox have scored 18 runs in eight games.

"Our aggressiveness was the big thing tonight as it has been all year long," said New York Manager Billy Martin. "We ran on Montgomery just as we would have run on (injured Carlton) Fisk. 'We'll run no matter who's in there.'"

Jenkins' undoing came in the third inning when he struck out Mickey Rivers only to have the fleet outfielder reach on a passed ball. Rivers stole second, went to third on a bunt single by Roy White and scored on Chris Chambliss' single to give New York a 3-2 lead. Carlos May, who doubled in a first-inning run, scored White home with a long fly and Chambliss scored on Oscar Gamble's single.

The Yankees got another run in the sixth on Thurman Munson's seventh homer and stretched the lead to 7-2 in the seventh as Willoughby walked May, hit Gamble and threw two wild pitches. New York added a ninth-inning run off rookie Rick Jones.

It can truthfully be said that the Texas Rangers played like they were in a fog Monday night.

They were ... literally. So were the Chicago White Sox and they got the best of the strange occurrence, ending up with a 9-4 victory over Texas thanks to a three-run, fogaided, first inning triple that fell only 20 feet behind the shortstop.

Rivers Is Target Of Fans' Abuse

BOSTON (UPI) — The New York Yankees had expected some kind of trouble from Boston fans when they took the field Monday night at Fenway park.

They got it in the form of small explosives thrown at outfielders, a few golf balls hurled their way and a smattering of unsavory remarks.

The outburst by some among the 35,939 fans came in response to a melee the last time the Red Sox were in Yankee Stadium. Red Sox pitcher Bill Lee suffered a dislocated left shoulder from the incident and catcher Carlton Fisk has missed the last three games as a result of an injured chest suffered during the May 20 mayhem.

The fans' prime target was center fielder Mickey Rivers, one of the more active participants in the fight.

"I expected it," said Rivers, who wore a batting helmet in the outfield Monday night during the Yankees' nationally televised 8-3 win. "A lot of different things happened (such as a cherry bomb exploding close behind him) and they called me a lot of names. But I just closed my mind to it and didn't pay any attention. I just wanted to play ball."

Outfielder Oscar Gamble said a golf ball barely missed him in the late innings.

A heavy fog settled over Chicago's Comiskey Park as the first inning began and reached maximum density in the bottom of the inning after Ralph Garr, Jorge Orta and Jim Spencer singled to fill the bases. Rookie Chet Lemon then hit what appeared to be a routine fly ball to short left field but left fielder Tom Grieve lost the ball in the fog and it fell behind shortstop Toby Harrah for a basesclearing triple.

"I didn't have the slightest idea where it was until it hit the ground," said Grieve. "All Toby did was point. All he knew was that it wasn't a grounder."

"I never saw it," said Harrah. "All I could do was point in the direction I thought the ball was. It was the worst conditions I ever played in."

After the first inning, the umpires conferred and announced they would call time thereafter whenever the fog obscured visibility. Twice they stopped the game for a total of about a minute and a half when the fog was at its peak. The fog gradually lifted and the air was clear for the final half of the game.

The damage was done in the first inning, however, as far as the Rangers were concerned. The White Sox, banging out a season high of 15 hits, coasted to victory behind the combined seven-hit pitching of rookie Pete Vuckovich and Dave Hamilton.

"I thought the umpires handled the situation well," said Texas Manager Frank Lucchesi. "I'm glad they stopped play when they did instead of making a farce out of the game. It was just as fair for one team as another."

In other AL games, Cleveland swept Baltimore 4-1 and 4-3, Oakland routed Kansas City 10-1, Detroit nipped Milwaukee 5-4 in 11 innings and California edged Minnesota 3-2.

Indians 4-4, Orioles 1-3

Larvell Blanks delivered a two-run triple in the first game and walloped a two-run homer in the nightcap to spark the Indians' sweep of the Orioles. Rick Manning also homered for Cleveland in the first game while Pat Dobson notched his fifth win in the second.

A's 10, Royals 1

Billy Williams drove in five runs with a homer, double and a single as the A's pounded the Royals. Mike Torrez went the distance for Oakland to notch his sixth win while Paul Splittorff suffered his sixth loss.

Tigers 5, Brewers 4

Tom Verzyer singled home the winning run with two out in the 11th inning to lift the Tigers over the Brewers. The Brewers had taken a 4-3 lead in the top of the 11th only to have the Tigers rally for two runs against reliever Ed Sprague. Rookie Mark Fidrych went the distance for Detroit for his second win.

Angels 3, Twins 2

Frank Tanana struck out 12 and allowed seven hits in posting his sixth straight triumph as the Angels nipped the Twins. Tanana, who has 94 strikeouts in 95 innings this year, boosted his record to 7-3 in outdueling Bert Blyleven. Bruce Bochte drove in two runs for California while Craig Kusick homered for the Twins.

Brazil Takes Bicentennial Soccer Cup

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — Gil, Roberto, and Zico Mark down these names; you'll hear a lot more of them between now and the 1978 World Cup soccer finals.

All three scored—Gil twice—Monday as Brazil came from behind to defeat Italy 4-1 to win the American Bicentennial soccer cup.

Brazil has not yet found a true successor to Pele, now with the New York Cosmos, but in these three young men it has three world class players.

Add the experience and midfield skill of Roberto Rivelino and you can appreciate why manager Oswaldo Brandao is happy with the way his team performed in the United States.

"Brandao has done a tremendous job in rebuilding our side since our defeat in West Germany in 1974, and I think our young players have now got enough experience for us to do well in Argentina in two years time," Rivelino said.

Brazil's defense was suspect, as it usually is, but with luck and some inept Italian finishing, it held firm Monday.

Brazil's four goals, all textbook gems, saved the day for the Yale Bowl crowd of 36,096, which included Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. The fans had come to watch an exhibition of the best in soccer — the teams have won five of 10 world cups between them — but instead they saw a display of bad temper, petulance and bad sportsmanship.

Instead of kicking the ball, players on both sides kicked each other.

Fabio Capello, who put Italy ahead with a headed goal after only 65 seconds, was carried from the field and needed 10 stitches to close a gash in his left knee. Lula of Brazil was sent off at the end of the first half for striking an opponent and Italy's Roberto Bettega and Franco Causio followed him to the showers in the second half.

Romeo Benetti, the Italian defender who started the rough stuff early in the match, and Brazil's Orlando received cautions from referee Ruiz Barreto of Uruguay.

Brazil's goals came in the 28th, 53rd, 71st and 72nd minutes.

Italy, as it did against England at Yankee stadium last Friday, fell apart in the second half.

Fulvio Bernardini, the technical director of Italy's national squad, said after the game: "There was simply no excuse. In the second half, after the second goal, it was no longer a game. The Brazilians took command physically and mentally. It was all their game."

Brazil won the round-robin tournament by scoring a lucky 1-0 win over England on a late goal by Roberto in Los Angeles, following that with the 2-0 defeat of Team America in Seattle where Gil got both goals.

It was Brazil's fourth win over Italy in eight games dating back to 1938, and on the team's performance in the United States and with the next World Cup to be played on South American soil, the Brazilians will be favored to win the championship for the fourth time at the expense of defending champion West Germany.

England Ends Series on Positive Note

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — England, its edge in experience a little one-sided and its patience amazing, caught a scrambling American goalkeeper out of position just enough times to finish the Bicentennial Cup soccer series on a positive note.

The English, their front line stymied the first 20 minutes by a strong Team America defense, used two goals by Kevin Keegan midway through the first half Monday as a boost toward a 3-1 victory over the international "Americans."

It was the winner's second win of the three-game series, with only a loss to Brazil marring England's record.

Led by native American goalie Bob Rigby of the New York Cosmos, Team America had England off guard until Trevor Brooking faked defenders out of position on a free kick by backpassing to Keegan. The Liverpool forward slammed a 25-yard shot past Rigby in the 24th minute.

Keegan scored again five minutes later on a pass from linemate Mick Channon after taking advantage of a miscue in the American zone.

"He's a hard worker," Team America coach Ken Furphy said of Keegan. "That's how you get goals — hard work."

Gerry Francis, who plays for the Queens Park Rangers, scored in the second half on a brilliant individual effort, outracing Rigby for a loose ball and going in for the goal.

But it was Rigby who kept the score from being any more one-sided than it was. He made 12 saves, most of the acrobatic variety, and made one play where he virtually swiped the ball from Keegan's foot when he crawled 10 feet to get it after being faked out of position.

"We've only been together a few games," said Rigby, who grew up just outside Philadelphia. "We had a little trouble keeping up their pace. But I think we played a respectable game."

Again, the offense for Team America was practically nonexistent. The losers got on the scoreboard for the first time in the three-game cup series on a goal by Stewart Scullion of Scotland and the Tampa Bay Rowdies with 3:54 remaining.

Team America, despite a wealth of talent led by Pele and Giorgio Chinaglia, had trouble getting the ball in the goal, but Furphy said it was a matter of experience and teamwork.

"You're talking about a team with 10 years experience to a team with seven weeks experience," Furphy said. "It was a tough task. But we had our chances in all the games we played and we had our chances today."

England coach Don Revie did not have much to say to reporters, but admitted that experience was the key in the game.

"You can't expect them to transform a team in a few weeks," he said. "We beat 'em with experience."

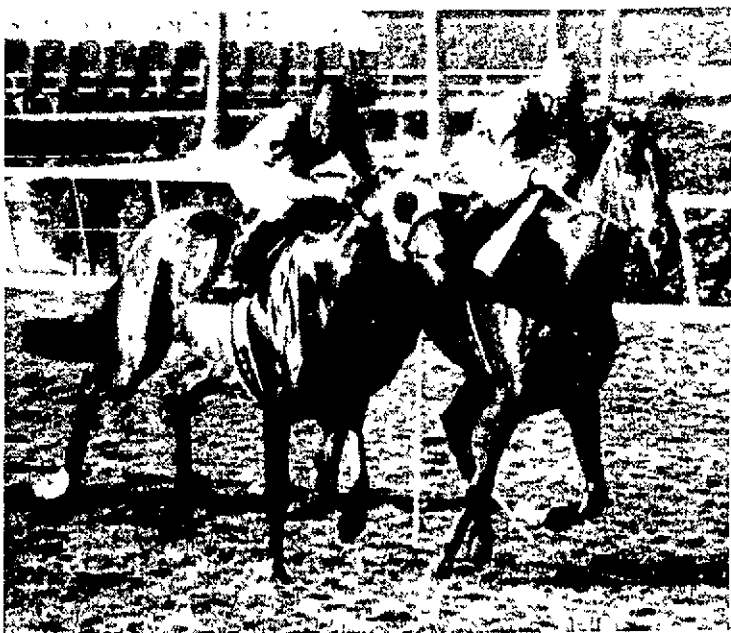

England's experience was awesome to watch at times. They kept the pressure up on offense but were very patient, sometimes passing the ball around the entire perimeter of the penalty area to find an opening.

"We broke down at times because we still don't know each other," Furphy explained. "But we played (this series) against the best nations in the world. We were just up against the best competition."

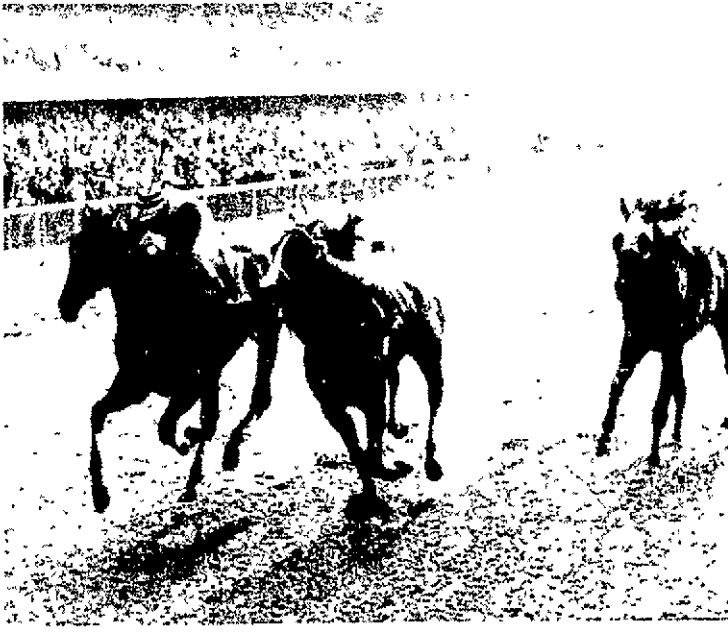

Rigby, who hopes for the day 11 native Americans can play high-caliber international soccer, agreed.

"The games were great for American soccer," he said. "We made progress each game. But it will still take a lot of work."

Frazier Apologizes to Umpire

NEW YORK (UPI) — Manager Joe Frazier of the New York Mets Monday issued a public apology to umpire Art Williams for comments made concerning the umpire's abilities Sunday and then blasted the press for blowing his statements out of proportion.

Frazier, whose team blew a three-run lead Sunday to the Pittsburgh Pirates in the ninth inning and eventually lost the game in the 11th, came down heavy on the black umpire after Williams failed to give New York pitcher Tom Seaver the benefit of the doubt on borderline pitches during the game.

"I want you to print my apology to the umpire last night, Mr. Williams," Frazier told the press after Monday's doubleheader with the Pirates. "In regards to all my good black friends in this country, I meant nothing racist in what I said. It's terrible to think it came out that way."

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — It may have been the shortest Indianapolis "500" in history but as far as that "green stuff" is concerned, it was the longest.

The Indianapolis Motor Speedway Monday night distributed a record purse of $1,037,775 to the participants of Sunday's rain-shortened race, with winner Johnny Rutherford splitting $256,121 with his crew from Team McLaren.

The previous record total was $1,015,686 in 1974 when Rutherford won his first Speedway race. The Texan's earnings were second only to the $271,697 Al Unser received for winning in 1970.

Caretaker Is Held In Elmer George Shooting

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (UPI) — A caretaker for the Tony Hulman estate at Terre Haute was being held without bond pending a court appearance today to answer charges stemming from the shooting death of Hulman's son-in-law, Elmer George.

Held without bond on a preliminary charge of assault and battery with intent to kill was Guy M. "Lum" Trolinger, 34, Terre Haute.

George, 47, a former race car driver and an official of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, home of the Indy 500 auto race, was shot to death at a Terre Haute farm owned by Hulman.

Sheriff's deputies said the shooting occurred after George apparently broke into the residence of Trolinger, who trained horses for the Hulman and George families.

Investigation into the shooting continued and authorities officially released only a one-paragraph statement relating the charges against Trolinger.

No motive was listed for the shooting, but deputies did not rule out self-defense.

George was married to Hulman's daughter, Mari, for 18 years. She filed for divorce May 3. The couple had four children.

Hulman, whose large farm at Terre Haute was across the road from Rose-Hulman University, declined immediate comment on the shooting.

George, who drove in three Indianapolis 500-mile races, recently was a vice president of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and director of the speedway's radio network.

Following Sunday's race, he reportedly argued with his wife in an Indianapolis motel, then made a call to the farm and ordered Trolinger to leave.

George apparently left his wife at Indianapolis, drove to the farm and broke into the two-story house occupied by Trolinger.

Elocutionist Out of Belmont

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eugene Cashman's Elocutionist, winner of the Preakness, will not run in Saturday's Belmont Stakes because of a slight filling in the colt's right hind leg.

The filling was discovered Sunday after Elocutionist worked out lightly in Chicago.

The Belmont Stakes field also will be missing Bert Firestone's Honest Pleasure, who finished second in the Kentucky Derby and fifth in the Preakness.

Another rookie, Spike Gehlhausen, received $14,197 despite the fact he did not complete a single lap.

Last year's total purse was $1,001,321, with Bobby Unser getting a check worth $214,031.

Dick Simon, who placed 32nd and completed just one lap, received the chief steward's "safety award" from Binford for his help to rookie drivers, Simon spent most of the month in a futile attempt aiding Janet Guthrie's bid to become the first woman to qualify and compete in the race.

Ghezzi Dies
MIAMI (UPI) — Funeral services are scheduled Wednesday for Vic Ghezzi, former PGA champion and member of golf's Hall of Fame. The 65-year-old Ghezzi died of cancer late Sunday at Miami's Heart Institute.
Ghezzi won more than 20 tournaments during his playing career, which was interrupted by three years of Army service in World War II. He won the PGA Championship in 1941, beating Byron Nelson on the 38th hole of Denver's Cherry Hill course.

Burgess Hired
ATLANTA (UPI) — Former major league catcher Forrest "Smoky" Burgess has been hired by the Atlanta Braves as a full-time hitting instructor for Greenwood of the Class A Western Carolinas League.
He is the third instructor added to the Braves' minor league system staff in eight days.

Floyd Is More Than a Familiar Face

By Steve Kane
KINGSTON — Brian Hurley tells a funny story:

"When I was young I was out with my family, and my mother said, 'Look, there's Floyd Patterson.' I looked, but I couldn't see him. Then I saw the Quarry-Patterson fight, and I rooted for Quarry because I thought he was Patterson...nobody told me he was black."

Hurley doesn't have problems recognizing the former champion any more. He sees Patterson five or six days a week at the Huguenot Boxing Club in New Paltz. Patterson runs the club for amateur boxers, and Hurley became one two years ago.

It didn't used to be unusual for a young man to want to become a boxer, but it is now. For Hurley the motivation came shortly after his family moved to New Paltz.

Borg, Ashe Begin Bids for French Open Tennis Championship

PARIS (UPI) — Bjorn Borg, hoping to become the first player to win the crown three straight years, and Arthur Ashe, bidding to gain the one major honor that has eluded him, today began their quests for the men's singles title at the $210,000 French Open Tennis Championships.

Borg will celebrate his 20th birthday Sunday almost exactly two years after becoming the youngest holder of a major title by beating Manuel Orantes on the red clay of the Roland Garros stadium.

Last year he downed his close friend and rival Guillermo Vilas to retain the crown and his search for the third win will begin on the same center court against Dominique Bedel, an unranked Frenchman, about 2 p.m.

Borg, who this year already has won the WCT title, has played some of his finest tennis at the French Championships. "I always feel especially confident on the center court here for some reason and I think I have a good chance to win the title for a third time," said Borg.

Ashe, currently the world's top-ranked player but seeded third behind the Swede and Vilas here, has won the Australian Open, Wimbledon and Forest Hills but never the French crown which constitutes the fourth tournament in the Grand Slam.

The 32-year-old reigning Wimbledon champion has never gotten past the quarter-finals of the competition and his tennis has appeared to suffer as much as Borg's has flourished on the slow clay.

Ashe had a harder first round task than Borg when he faced South Carolinian Raz Reid, ranked 30th in the United States.

Nicklaus' Tourney A Hit

DUBLIN, Ohio (UPI) — Roger Maltbie won the $40,000 first place money, but Jack Nicklaus won the accolades for the inaugural $200,000 Memorial Tournament at Muirfield Village here.

Nicklaus designed and built the par-72, 7,072-yard course and came up with the idea of having the tournament honor past golfing greats.

This year the late Bobby Jones was honored and next year it will be Walter Hagen.

A gallery of about 20,000 circled the amphitheater-type 18th green and cheered Nicklaus as he finished his final round Sunday, even though he was out of contention for the title.

Hale Irwin, who lost to Maltbie on the fourth hole of a playoff, praised Nicklaus and the tournament highly.

"Jack has made a magnificent effort here," said Irwin, the former U.S. Open champion who collected $22,800 for his second place finish. "He has taken a lot of time and worked hard on this tournament. He has put his name in the record books in another category."

"We play in a lot of first time tournaments and for a first time tournament none came even close to this one. If they didn't change a thing it would have to be one of the great tournaments we play in. But it is going to get better. I don't know how, but it will."

Don Bies, who finished third and won $14,200, was even more lavish in his praise of the tournament.

"I don't think going up the 18th at the Masters was as impressive as here," said Bies. "Boy, it was really impressive coming in there."

Maltbie, who birdied the 18th hole to defeat Irwin in the playoff, said it was "just a great tournament." He got a four-over-par 76 and Irwin earned a three under par 69 to set up the playoff.

Maltbie feels "destiny" took a hand on the 17th hole, the third hole of the playoff, when his second shot seemed about to go into the gallery but instead hit a stake holding a restraining rope, and bounced back onto the green.

"When you think of the size of that hole, 180 yards away and the bounce it took to the green, it has to be some sort of destiny," Maltbie said. "I was terribly scared I hit somebody on the head because of the way it came back to the green. I was terribly relieved I didn't hit anybody."

"But I'm not going to be ashamed for the way I played for four days and for four extra holes because of that one hole."

Jai-Alai To Debut

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (UPI) — The new Bridgeport Jai-Alai fronton opens tonight with eight of the world's greatest players going head-to-head in the feature 10th game.

Highlighting the pre-opening ceremonies will be the New York Knicks' backcourt star, Earl Monroe, who will throw out the first pellets (ball).

Monroe, Bridgeport Mayor John C. Mandanici, and the nine members of the Commission on Special Revenue, headed by Chairman Paul Silvergield, will assemble on the Jai-Alai court for opening festivities at 7 p.m.

The 10th game line-up lists (from post position 1 to 8) Guisasaola, Chimela, Aramayo, Bengoa, Egurbi, Orbes, Churrua, and Ondarrea. They will be playing to a seven-point game in one of two singles matches on the card.

Twelve games are scheduled with daily double wagering in the first two contests. Quiniela betting will be offered on all 12 games while perfecta and trifecta will be held on games two through 12.

Bryant Enters

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Rosalyn Bryant, who posted the nation's fastest time in the 400 meters this year, will enter at least two events at the National AAU track and field championships at UCLA's Drake Stadium June 10-12.

Suns Must Forget About Boxing and Think About Track

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — The Phoenix Suns must forget about boxing and think about track if they want to knot their NBA championship series with the Boston Celtics.

The Suns, in their first title series ever, and Celtics, who always seem to be in playoffs, meet Wednesday night here in the fourth game of this year's finals.

The Suns, employing the run-run-run tactics of their enemy, beat Boston Sunday 105-98 here. This left the Celtics with only a 2-1 lead in the series.

Boston is the epitome of what a fast-break team should be, but in the third game of the series they seemed to have lead in their sneakers and the Suns seemed to be wearing track spikes.

"If we didn't play like they play," Phoenix' Curtis Perry said,

"we would've gotten run out of our coliseum.

Ricky Sobers, the Phoenix guard responsible for bringing up the ball, will have to employ the stoicism of a surgeon in the next contest. In the third game he was ejected in the second quarter when he and Boston's Kevin Stacom turned into lightweight fighters after showing under the basket. Stacom also got the thumb from the referees.

Veteran Sun Dick Van Arsdale said 'Sobers' loss "hurt us quite a bit.

"It put a lot of pressure on us to get the ball up the floor. I'm not a ball-handling guard and Paul (Westphal) doesn't like to bring the ball up that much either.

"Ricky does a better job at that than either of us."

Ramsey To Coach Portland?

PORTLAND (UPI) — Len Wilkens, head coach of the Portland Trail Blazers, faced dismissal today and probable replacement by former Buffalo Braves coach Jack Ramsey.

Blazer officials refused to comment on the report in today's editions of the Portland Oregonian but the paper said formal announcement was expected at a news conference, tentatively set for this afternoon.

"I have no comment," Wilkens said.

"I cannot say anything," Ramsey said, speaking from his New Jersey home.

The newspaper said its sources indicated the prime mover behind removing Wilkens after only two years with the NBA club was Blazers President Larry Weinberg.

Wilkens, who still has two years left on his contract, coached Portland to a 38-44 season his first year, the best the Blazers ever had and good enough for third place in the Pacific Division. Last season they were 37-45.

Ramsey coached the Braves to a 46-36 record this past season and was released after Buffalo fell to Boston in the Eastern Conference semifinals.

Size Worries Smith

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — After getting his first good look at the candidates for the U.S. Olympic basketball team, coach Dean Smith reacted with guarded optimism.

"We have some problems. We have some talent," said Smith, head coach of the University of North Carolina, after putting the 53 amateur ball players through a tough physical workout Monday at North Carolina State University.

The size of the team was Smith's biggest worry and he made no secret of his disappointment at the top college players who failed to show up.

"Ironically, we seem to have most of the talent in the 6-5 range," he said.

Of the four big men who were consensus All-Americans, Smith said, only one, North Carolina's Mitch Kupchak, showed up for the tryouts.

Smith commented on the absence of Alabama's Leon Douglas, who unlike some other top players had at least accepted the selection committee's invitation and had received an airplane ticket.

"Leon wanted to play bad. I haven't heard from him, but I feel sure something must have come up," said Smith.

Smith also expressed disappointment at some of the players' physical conditions after timing each candidate in the mile and in wind sprints, but put part of the blame on himself for running the players through three half-game scrimmages Sunday night.

Despite the disappointments, Smith said he was anxious to get the 15-member team selected so they could begin setting up an offense for the big teams put on the court by Russia, Yugoslavia, and Italy.

USC Assured Of Net Tie

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (UPI) — Southern California's doubles team of Bruce Manson and Chris Lewis has guaranteed the Trojans part of the NCAA tennis title by taking Brigham Young's Bruce Kleege and Mike Nissly, 8-3, 6-4, 7-6.

The two Trojan sophomores kept the pressure on Kleege and Nissly throughout the game, although letting up in the third set. USC broke Kleege's service for the final point to win the tiebreaker, 5-1.

"We broke them with relative ease," Manson said. "When we did it helped build our confidence. We knew they were a one-two punch so we tried to make them hit as many shots as possible. We let up a little bit in the third set but we still kept the pressure on."

Going into today's final round, USC had 21 points—one more than defending champion UCLA and Stanford. The Trojans meet UCLA today for the doubles title and the team championship and if USC wins, it will be the school's 12th tournament title.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

TUESDAY, JUNE 1

Your birthday today: Follow sensible habits, a proper diet, so you have plenty of energy for a year of new experience in unfamiliar fields, with emphasis on your personal involvement. Fortunate results are promised after a midyear decision on long-range goals. Relationships weather minor crises if you're reasonable. Today's natives are sharply observant, quick to point out only human flaws and errors.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Begin the month with a review session: set budgets for both contingencies and opportunities. Things done just for fun lead to valuable contacts for the future.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): You don't have to shoulder it all. Let eager beavers get local conditions back in order while you tend to special problems. After hours, see to your hobbies.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Put your critics, audience to work. Organize programs for all concerned to share. Help to get them started. Improve routines, do not show them a no shortcut is available.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Make changes on the basis of conclusions you reached over the weekend. Support comes from surprising people. Ask friends for advice, but think for yourself.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Plunging ahead with what's obviously right, you forget it's somebody else's business. Stick to personal projects. Discretion now eases career moves later.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The formal action you take may have beneficial consequences. Go outside usual daily rounds to sharpen your wits, open your eyes to useful ideas.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): There's a place for you in friends' activity. Where you are positive of your goals, unexpected aid is forthcoming. Be alert for a last-minute switch in plans.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Odd situations resulting from recent changes offer lots of opportunity if you are well prepared. Friends aren't mind readers; tell them what is needed.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Deal with official sources, complete formalities. Anything you do attracts public notice. Make every move count, leaving nothing to guesswork.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your urge to range far and wide is stymied by mate or associates who cause enough commotion to keep you close by. Accurate notes, figures are important.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Pick up some of the slack as others fail to deliver quotas. Assume leadership to clear away problems until proper authorities arrive on the scene.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Tackle obvious chores, but do no more than absolutely necessary. Quit while you're ahead. Youngsters are difficult if you provoke them. Peace!

Jean Adams TEEN FORUM

By Jean Adams, Ph.D.

THREE WORRIES: (Q.) Jean, please help me with my hangups. I have three problems: (1.) SHYNESS: When a boy makes a pass at me I get very embarrassed because I am so shy. I have a reputation for being popular and real good with boys, but I don't know how to unshy myself, if you know what I mean. Can you tell me?

(2.) NATURE: I haven't started my period yet. I am 13 and very active. I'm scared I might start it at school. Can you tell me what to do and how not to be so scared?

(3.) MARKS: I'm only a 32B and not heavy at all, but I have stretch marks. I don't know where or how I got them. How can I get rid of them? —A Girl in Alobama

(A.) Being shy is not all bad. Don't be ashamed of it. Try to think of others more and of yourself less and this should relax you somewhat. If we think too much of ourselves we make ourselves much too important, and everything that comes at us hurts us that much more.

A popular girl eventually gets used to the fact that passes are going to be made. She learns that they are really compliments. She should be firm with the boys who make them, but kind too.

As for your second problem, you may be in your summer vacation by now. No matter what the situation, be prepared at all times by keeping the necessary equipment in your purse. If you are prepared, you won't be so scared.

And, too, all of us have imperfections. Some are correctible, some aren't. Stretch marks aren't. Do not talk about yours, do not show them, just smile and no one will know. On down the road, a man who really loves you will accept them as he accepts you.

(Write to Dr. Jean Adams, care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001. Every letter is read, but because of the great number received Dr. Adams cannot send personal replies.)

show I have let the two hearts alone, but he hated to be shut out and tried two spades which North raised to four.

East cashed his king of diamonds and continued with the nine of clubs. South's jack forced West's king and dummy ruffed, but now South was one trick short of his contract. He couldn't get to his hand to take a heart finesse without using up dummy's last trump and could not avoid the loss of two more diamond tricks.

South could have made the contract after taking his ace of trump... if he had led a heart to dummy's queen. He would have been mighty lucky, but good play would have given luck that chance to take over.

By Oswald & James Jacoby
West opened one of those weak two bids that are fairly common today. A double would have been for takeout, so North passed. South really

Gotbaum Not Worried About U.S. Threat

NEW YORK (UPI) — Victor Gotbaum, head of a major city employees' union, says he's not worried about federal government threats to cut off loans if municipal workers win pay raises.

Gotbaum called the federal government a "minor stockholder" in New York, and angrily lashed out Sunday at Treasury Secretary William Simon for threats to withhold federal help unless municipal employees agreed to continue a wage freeze imposed last year.

"Mr. Simon is only a minor stockholder in this city and we're a major one," said Gotbaum, executive director of District Council 37 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

His threats scare me not one bit," Gotbaum made his remarks on the WCBS-TV program "Newsmakers."

Gotbaum repeatedly stressed the $1.16 billion the city saved because municipal unions accepted the wage freeze, 40,000 layoffs and pay hike deferrals.

The labor leader said the 200,000 union members he will represent in contract negotiations next month might accept a contract in which wage increases were tied to productivity.

But he repeated his position that the AFSCME would consider past contributions in the form of layoffs as valid demonstrations of productivity gains.

Stephen Berger, executive director of the Emergency Financial Control Board, has said past productivity cannot be a basis for future wage increases.

Unless a contract is signed by July 1, Gotbaum has threatened to take a strike vote and possibly pull his members off the job, two weeks before the opening of the Democratic National Convention.

Arkansas Burial For Martha Mitchell

NEW YORK (UPI) — Martha Mitchell, the Arkansas girl who became one of the more colorful and controversial figures of Nixon's Washington but died destitute and alone, will be buried in her hometown of Pine Bluff, Ark.

Mrs. Mitchell, estranged wife of former Attorney General John Mitchell, died Monday. She was 67.

Mrs. S. Ray West of Pine Bluff, a close friend of Mrs. Mitchell, said services Thursday will be led by Rev. Richard Dodds and Rev. W. L. McColgan at the First Presbyterian Church in Pine Bluff, with burial in Bellwood Cemetery.

The Campbell Funeral Home "handling the New York end" said it had no immediate information as to when the body would be flown to Arkansas.

Mrs. Mitchell, who never lost her soft Southern drawl even while delivering verbal punches at the Nixon administration during the Watergate scandals, died of a rare strain of bone marrow cancer, multiple myeloma. Death came less than 24 hours after she was admitted to a hospital.

Only her physician, Dr. Klaus Mayer, was at her side. Despite phone calls from administrators and her doctor that she was "very gravely ill," neither her former husband nor their daughter, Marty, 14, came to her bedside.

Mayer told a news conference Mrs. Mitchell was despondent toward the end. He said she "felt cheated out of life. She wanted a career of her own."

The doctor said her last words to him before she lapsed into unconsciousness were, "I have to go to the hospital. I'm sick. I really feel awful."

In recent months, Mrs. Mitchell had received chemotherapy treatments and had been "doing quite well" at home, where she was attended by two nurses, Mayer said.

Carey: Computerize Welfare to Save $$

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — The state has proposed computerized systems to help it bring its welfare system up to date and to save money by eliminating duplicate benefits.

The proposal, made by Gov. Hugh L. Carey, would first link New York City's welfare rolls to the data banks and then other counties so applicants could be cross-checked to see if they were getting any other aid or were eligible elsewhere.

Carey has asked the legislature to appropriate $3.7 million for two systems to streamline the $3.4 billion welfare operation — a proposal which has been talked about for several years.

The 1975 legislature approved $1.6 million to begin design work on the computer systems — one each for the Medicaid and welfare programs — which the Department of Social Services predicts would eventually save $1 million a day.

It will take three to four years to completely implement the $7.6 million program, but savings will begin as soon as various segments are put into operation, a spokesman for Social Services said.

New York is the only large state in the nation which has not adopted a computer system to handle the complicated record-keeping involved in welfare and Medicaid services. An attempt by former Gov.

Nelson Rockefeller to move to such a system was stymied a few years ago when it was charged that a Texas-based consultant, H. Ross Perot, had been given preference in the awarding of a design contract.

the break-in also told Wells College graduates Saturday that the country has entered a period of "national good will" without issues "to send people into the streets."

Speaking at the all-woman school's 108th annual commencement, Woodward said the latest Washington scandal involving Ohio Rep. Wayne Hays' love life is "clearly improper but not anything to send anyone to the barricades."

The Hays affair, the Watergate reporter said, is "essentially a minor sex scandal about a 65-year-old man who happens to be in Congress and who sought a little love."

Rubs Out Record

FAIR OAKS, Calif. (UPI) — J.D. "Fingers" Foreman is "rubbed out" but happy as the world record holder for continuous massage.

Foreman, 55, a draftsman for a computer design firm, Monday completed 76 hours of massaging more than 40 volunteers. He said he would apply for entry into the Guinness Book of World Records.

"I saw a lot of goofy things going on in politics and in the Bicentennial and decided I could be just as goofy as they were," Foreman said in a telephone interview.

Foreman said he began learning massage at age seven when his grandmother, a Cherokee Indian, made him rub her ankles. "She'd give me a smack with her cane if I stopped," he said.

Still 'Gate Questions

AURORA, N.Y. (UPI) — Washington Post reporter Bob Woodward says the country has not yet answered the main questions raised by the Watergate scandal of whether former President Nixon represented the values of the country or, if he didn't, why the democratic process failed.

411 Holiday Toll Tops Estimates

By UPI

The demise of long waiting lines at service stations and the return of long lines of holiday traffic on the nation's highways helped push the Memorial Day weekend death toll past preholiday estimates.

The death toll for the 78-hour holiday weekend climbed past the 400 mark Monday night as holiday revelers headed home. Ten homeward-bound travelers were killed in two separate plane crashes in Illinois Monday night.

A United Press International nationwide count showed 411 persons dead in traffic accidents during the three-day weekend that began at 6 p.m. local time Friday and ended at midnight Monday.

The National Safety Council had estimated between 340 and 400 persons could die in traffic mishaps during the holiday period.

A breakdown of accidental deaths:

Traffic	411
Drowning	56
Planes	19
Total	486

California reported 55 traffic deaths, Michigan had 26, New York 24, Florida 19, Ohio 17 and Texas 16. Four states — Alaska, Delaware, North Dakota and South Dakota — reported no traffic fatalities.

Kent Milton, California Highway Patrol spokesman, said the state's death toll of well over half a hundred reflected a resumption of heavy traffic flow after the gasoline shortage years, the occurrence of multiple-death accidents, and a disregard of the still existing 55 mile per hour speed limit.

"In 1974 and 1975, traffic was down because of the shortage, especially in 1974," Milton said. "But now we're back to the 1973 level of traffic, or above ... So I'm sure we're seeing that in relation to Memorial Day — the increase in traffic.

"The third reason is more speeding. People are ignoring the 55 m.p.h. speed limit."

Bad weather caused two deaths in freak accidents. A tornado picked up a motor home in northeast Oklahoma and set it upside down in the opposite lane of a highway, killing a passenger. In Tulsa, an Oral Roberts University student trying to push a car on a flooded street fell into a manhole and drowned.

In other accidents Monday night, seven persons died when their twin-engine plane crashed into a fog-shrouded swamp near Chicago's suburban DuPage County Airport and three persons were killed in another plane crash near Shelbyville, Ill.
